Usage of Ulrichs Web

- To determine if a journal peer-reviewed.
- To determine what journal to submit articles for publication.
- To find some journals in your field to use as a starting point in a literature search.
- To determine information about the journals .publisher, editors etc.

Coverage

Academic and scholarly journals (all types); open access publications, peer-reviewed titles; popular magazines, newspapers, newsletters; conference proceedings; regularly published publications, available free, small publishers, large commercial publishers, and not-for-profit publishers.

To find Peer-reviewed Journal

You can check by looking up the journal title (NOT the title of the article) in a database called UlrichsWeb. Look for the referee's shirt next to the journal title. This will tell you whether or not the journal is peer-reviewed (Peer-reviewed articles may also be called scholarly, academic, or refereed).
